A goodly number of teachers from Cow ley county are expected to attend the meeting of the Southwestern Kansas Teachers' association in this city today and tomorrow. Prof. Rice of Winfield is on the program for a paper on "Physical Training of the Pupil." Mrs. Caten will read a paper on "Teachers' Examinations and Issuing Certificates." All the counties in the association's jurisdiction will be represented in the meeting, and many others from different parts of the state are expected to be in attendance and participate in the services.

THANKSGIVING --- CHILDREN'S DAY.

To the Editor of the Eagle. Another day for the annual expression of gratitude for our many blessings is here. A generous public has always responded nobly tothis most touching of all our charities, but as hard times increase, our family increases, and the ap-proaching winter finds us crowded to our utmost capacity, and necessities of every kind pressing us. Donations may also be sent direct to the home, No. 119 Pennsylvania avenue, if any Provisions of every kind, clothing or money, is always needed, and hard would he the heart that would not feel happier after having done some little act of kindness for these twenty-five homeless, or phaned-or worse than orphaned-little ones, that fill our Children's home this coming Thanksgiving day.

Failure of Deep Sea Photography. Some time ago a deep sea photographic party left Japan, carrying with them an ingenious apparatus for photographing under water. This apparatus consisted of an ordinary camera inclosed in a cast fron box sufficiently strong to withstand from 600 to 1,000 pounds pressure to the square inch. When the stand attached to this touched bottom, by an ingenious contriv-ance the cap was removed from the lens and the contents of two bottles were caused to mix, this mixing resulting in an explosion, giving the light necessary for the pro-duction of a photograph. Disaster has overlaken the mission. From what can be gathered by some means or other the mix ng process must have taken place prema turely. A terrific explosion occurred, two persons have been more or less injured, and the apparatus, which took many months to construct, is now at the bottom of the Pacific.

A Brief Beview of the Fair's History Up to Date. The Columbian World's fair management at Chicago has at last got matters into a promising shape, and not a day too soon. It is only when one reviews the history from the beginning that he gets any idea of the difficulties overcome. There has been a fight from the start, first between sections and their between states advocates of rival sites in Chicago. In 1885 the directors of the Interstate exposition at Chicago adopted this:

He quit it again in July. that a great Worse's fair should be held in the cago in the year 1894, the four bundredth anni-versary of the landing of Columbus in America. St. Louis promptly objected that she had already taken the lead in the matter, but warring railways and keep rates, both passenger in the Atchison, Topokrand Santa Fe. While in the service of this rout he held succession. Chicago went on with her organization to secure the government's aid. Several congressmen then declared in favor of Wash-ington as the place. New York also made an earnest plea, and other cities followed. There was unreasonable delay, and not till 1889 did congress begin to more, then the bill was referred to the committee on for eign affairs, and rival cities began their arguments. New York, as usual, "ran it into politics," and walted too long for the state legislature to authorize the appropriation of $10,080,000 for the work. Feb. 24 last the boase of representatives gave the fair to Chicago. Eight ballots were taken, the last resulting: Chicago. 157, New York, 167, St. Louis, 25; Wash

WOMAN'S HOME DUTIES.

THE TRUE SPHERE OF THE WIFE IS IN THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

The Study of Becoming a Good Wife and Mother Is Paramount to All Other Considerations-The Opinion of a Chicage Woman on the Subject.

Concerning the true sphere of woman there will probably never be anything like perfect agreement. Even if its demarks tions should ever be settled to the saler tion of everybody the achievement would be short lived, because the women would not remain in the sphere thus mapped out. They would be out or trying to get out be-fore twenty-four tours had passed, and the question would be reopened; but although this is true it does not follow that attempts to ascertain the true place and duties of woman in social, industrial and political life should be abandoned, or that the many men and women who have interested themselves in this subject and are striving to reach results beneficial to humanity should be discouraged. As well might it be claimed that a person should stop studying because it is impossible for him to become omniscient, or cease paying heed to sanitary laws because he never can enjoy perfect health.

Woman's duties and privileges in the family, in the community, in the state; what should be her relations to her husband and children, to the woman next door, what part she should take in making and administering laws and in the earning of bread-all these are questions which will be discussed as long as mankind exists. And the discussion must prove fruitful of good results, for without it the development of woman's sphere cannot keep pace with that of man, and cannot harmonize with a progressive civilization. In the agitation of what is loosely termed the woman question the women themselves have taken the lead. Many of them have given far greater thought to the subject than have men, and in consequence their views are entitled to especial considera-

WHAT A WOMAN THINKS.

To some phases of the woman question Mrs. S. M. Nickerson, of this city, has given considerable thought, and upon them she holds ideas which her friends think are pretty sound.

"There are so many subjects," she said. "that are of special interest to women, young and old, rich and poor, which are England for their bourymoon. Mrs. Mac-almost neglected by the press that I am kenzie is a native of Chimne. Her husften amazed. How a woman can make her social and family duties harmonize, how manage so that they will not clash, is a perplexing question, and one the failure to understand which causes a vast amount 150 N Market St., Wichita, Kan of trouble and unhappiness in the world, It is a question upon which the press might enlighten the people, and thus do much good. My idea is that harmonizing social expense for fact of thirty costs. and family duties rests very largely on the exercise of tact.

"I'll illustrate: Let us suppose the lady in question has a family of three children growing up, and of course a husband. Again let me suppose she is as fond of her family as she ought to be, so that she is unwilling to intrust the task of extering to the maintenance of the health, comfort and education of her children entirely to strangers. No more does she wish to have her husband's tastes, likes and dislikes trodden upon by unreliable servants.

"She, therefore, controls the household and its various needs by constant and care 213 South Main, Wichita, Kan. ful personal supervision, and this of neces sity takes up much of her time and thought. She must, however, obtain reliable and intelligent help-a woman, per-haps best a widow, on whose discretion and zeal she may rely during her short but frequent absences from home. For all this she must retain active control of her own house. Her judgment must be appealed to on all matters of any importance, and nothing must be done about the house

ENTERTAINING AT HOME. "Having thus arranged matters on the inside this lady must choose a circle of social intimates for herself and family. The smaller the circle the better for her in this matter, too, she must consult wishes and tastes of her husband, and she must try to include among her intimates some of different qualities, mental and social, so that there will be displayed fine manners and brilliant conversational powers, wit and humor and artistic tastes-all blended together. In this way she will eltain for her own entertainments, and she will enjoy at entertainments given at the houses of her own social intimates, the aggregate of all that makes society worth cultivating. "She will thus be sure formit not only her own taste but also that of her husband and of every invited guest, for there will be congenial people for every one of Then she must restrict her social duties within reasonable bounds, and as she has been careful to limit the circle of her ac-quaintances and friends, she is easily able to do that. She will have enough time left every day to devote herself to her maternal and wifely duties without is any way neglecting those imposed upon ner by the demands of society. Then, as to en-tertaining. That is an art which needs to be studied a lifetime to be understood, and above all it needs natural qualifications

"Generally speaking, though it may be stated as an axiom that small ranging in number between ten and twenty are the most delightful, many epitures in social lutercourse even maintain that the number of the muses ought never to be exceeded. Add to your enter-tainment the spice of novelty, securing now and then a valuable attraction such as a distinguished foreigner, a scientifi man of note, a great traveler or an artist or literary man of celebrity, so that there is something healds the ordinary mental ford to what the appetite of your great."
